Sonnets Dedicated to the Enigmatic Lewis

At the heart of this anthology lies a sequence of passionate sonnets penned for the enigmatic Lewis. These sonnets are a testament to the power of love, its ability to both exalt and torment. Each verse explores a different facet of this complex emotion, capturing the essence of longing, desire, and the bittersweet nature of human connection.

A Sonnet Dedicated To Sir George Gipps

*My country! I am sore at heart for thee!
An in mine ear, like a storm-heralding breeze,
A voice against thee gathers warningly!
Lo, in what hands seem now thy destinies!
Hands grasping all, through party means, to seize
Some private benefit: and what should be
Thy Freedom's dawn, but gives ascendancy
To lawless Squatters, and the Hacks of these!
Woe waits a land, where men are wise and brave
For naught but self! When even the best aside
Are thrusting honesty to don the knave!
Where worth is trampled on by vulgar pride!
And where all beauty of the mind, decried,
Hovers dying o'er a Mammon-delved grave.*

Charles Harpur
